Education

September 2019 – January 2023 University of Oxford - DPhil in International Relations (PHD)

- Thesis: The Origins of Islamist Insurgencies: The Social-Institutional Foundations of an Ideological Shift. The thesis develops an original theory of ideological choice to explain the micro-institutional basis for the macro-historical rise of Islamist ideology among rebel groups. The theory is substantiated through the comparative tracing of groups and regions in Somalia, Russia, Ethiopia, and Pakistan.
- Viva Voce successfully completed on 10. December 2022 with prof. Paul Staniland and prof. Neil Ketchley as the examiners.

September 2017 – July 2019 University of Oxford - MPhil in International Relations (Distinction).

- Thesis title: “Governance, Disorder, and the Islamic Courts: Explaining the Rise of Militant Islamism Among the Somali.”
- Winner of the Deirdre and Paul Malone Thesis Prize in International Relations, awarded by the International Studies Graduate Committee at the Oxford Department of Politics and IR.

September 2015 – September 2016 London School of Economics and Political Science - MSc International Relations (Distinction).

- Thesis title: “The Balance of Communities and the Shia Revival: An Eclectic Study of the Significance of the Sunni-Shi’ite Divide to the Rekindling of the Iran-Saudi Rivalry.”

January 2013 – June 2015 University of Oslo - Bachelor’s Degree in Political Science with Courses in History (Grade avg. A)

- Thesis: “Iran, Sanctions, and the Joint Plan of Action: A Study on the Efficacy of the 2010-2013 U.S. Sanctions Against Iran.” Recognised by faculty to be an exemplary undergraduate thesis and used as example for later students.

August 2011 – December 2012 Norwegian University of Science and Technology (NTNU) - Courses in Political Science (Grade avg. A) Transferred to the University of Oslo.

August 2008 – June 2011 Levanger Videregående Skole (High School) – Grade avg. 5.3
